30 Bullets Per Minute
From Semi-Automatic

A new semi-automatic rifle is a firearm intended for use by the infantry soldiers of any country and can likewise be used by the cavalry, marines, mechanized units, airmen and civilians.

The semi-automatic means that it is not a full automatic as is the case with machine guns. The latter is a continuous stream of bullets so long as the trigger is held back and the magazine is full. Upholstery 'Breath'
Remember 'way back when car interiors were 'upholstered' in leather and leather substitutes? Hard on the clothes, hard on the car in winter. Car makers using the new canvas cloth speak with reason, then, of its 'breathability' which allows for a passage of air through seat cushions.

Code Message With Hair

Code messages were written with the curls of a woman's hairdress by a barber at Hickam field, Honolulu, American's largest airbase in the Pacific.

M. L. ("Blue") Hix, the barber, devised the code. Its secret lies in the arrangement of the curls. He told army officers that he could send 200 words in a single hair-dress.

Each letter of the alphabet has a curl of all its own. The message is written in a system of curls and waves turning left or right, up or down, and in various combinations.

He demonstrated to army officers how secret agents could deliver messages with the aid of a pretty woman's hair and the deft touch of a barber, by waving a message in the hair of Bunnie Paris, Hickam field bookkeeper.

To those who could read Hix's code, the curls of Miss Paris' hair plainly said:

"Blow up power plant."

Stewardesses on Streetcars
The dying trolley car is making an eleven-hour effort to come back. Its newest effort to head off extinction appears in Atlantic City, where the management of an inter-urban line, taking a cue from the air line, is installing hostesses. Two uniformed girls will ride the cars, to supply newspapers and magazines, to assist passengers, help women on and off at stops and otherwise look after people's comfort.

The plan sounds fine, and it would probably be approved unanimously by trolley passengers, but will it succeed? Imagine a stewardess fighting her way through a densely packed crowd at 15 to 16 hand a picture magazine to a homeward-bound citizen, then slipping to the exit to assist a housewife in alighting from the car. Not that the passengers will appreciate these little attentions to lighten the rigors of trolley-riding, but the stewardesses would have to be sisters of Superman in order to do the job.

Experts say newest airplanes of U. S. equal those built in Europe.
